Videos on housing struggles, sub-prime and free culture

ByConservas

Several videos on housing struggles, sub-prime and free culture in Spain courtesy of CONSERVAS, Barcelona <http://www.conservas.tk>

The material has been shown and used all over Spain and now we are also organising shows or performance-presentations (see doc below), and at the same time we are opening a space here in Barcelona for exchange with others who are busy working on the same issues internationally. We are very open to colaborations and proposals. All the material exists in english, spanish, french and italian.

HOUSING: VIDEO (6m) - This video was spread in the context of the struggle against property violence. In just two days, this video received thousands of hits on YouTube and became the most-watched Spanish video that week. There was an enormous press response, and political parties were forced to issue denials and "promises" (which haven't been kept yet!..) four days before the election. Soon after, a request from well-known financial institution "La Caixa" led YouTube to censor this video alleging a non-existent copyright infringement. This caused a chain reaction of solidarity and protest by Internet users who uploaded the video on a massive scale.

The video has so far been seen by 100000 people and appears on hundreds of forums.:
