hi Anthony,

I guess you might be already informed about this seminar.....Hope you are well!! I've been quite exhausted lately writing, writing, writing.....I'd love to come again to London, maybe before March.....

talk to you soon!

all the best

m.

Total Regeneration **

European perspectives on the roles, agendas and impacts for cultural practitioners within collaborative art practice

Friday 19 January 2007* 9.30 ? 5.30pm

The Total Regeneration symposium is being held to accompany the Art for Change exhibition. It draws upon the experience of participatory art practitioners across Europe in order to make greater cultural sense of the forces, constraints and possibilities encountered by those working within the context of regeneration.

This event will explore both definition and instruction: in whose terms is regeneration being enacted? How does it frame, facilitate or impede the development of an incisive and forward-looking cultural politics? Whose agendas are artists following, and how should cultural operators situate themselves within political directives of this kind? With a unique combination of speakers and presentations the symposium aims to provide a platform to reflect on and exchange the pluralities of cultural response to such issues through a local, national and European lens. There will be opportunities to contribute and exchange experience through presentations, roundtable debates and plenary discussion, with feedback from an external observer. For more information on the symposium please paste the following link into your browser:
